"A BAGGAGE CHECK."
An engagement of more than ordinary interest will be the appearance at the Grand Opera House to-morrow night of Chas. E. Blaney's popular and most successful comedy "A Baggage Check." The play has been re-written and made funnier than ever before, if such a thing is possible, as the play from its first production has been conceded by both press and public to be one of the funniest farce comedies ever written. The company this season is said to be an entirely new one, and is also said to be a clever young comedian, Clyde Stanley, who has been specially engaged for the principal comedy part. Pretty girls, handsome costumes, clever specialties, special scenery and new music are special features of this popular play.

Full content now is the chappie. Naught cares he for joys of kingdom come; Now he is supremely happy—Cigarettes, football, chrysanthemum.

KISMET.
A notable event of Thanksgiving week will be the engagement of the Mabel Dorr Comedy-Opera Company, numbering about fifty people, which sings the beautiful comic opera "Kismet," Tuesday night at the opera house. An exchange says: A good-sized audience witnessed the first performance here of "Kismet" or "Two Tangled Turbans" which was presented by the Minerva Dorr Comedy-Opera Company at Rand's opera house last night. The libretto of the piece is by Richard F. Carroll and the music was written by Gustave Kerker. The combined effort of these two well-known contributors to the operatic stage is an entertaining lyric comedy, full of action and terse dialogue. The music is catchy and the choruses especially tuneful. The scenic surroundings are picturesque. The company contains some excellent material and should make a continued success of the piece. The costumes were handsome and added much to the beauty of the scenes. Miss Dorr who has been seen here before in "Niobe" was well received in "Kismet" and Ed. H. Carroll, as Haideez, was excellent, furnishing much amusement for the audience. W. R. Hatch was deserving of credit for his portrayal of the role of Dan De Lyon. Others worthy of mention were John Saunders, as Chinchilla, and Miss Maud Fuller as Absinthia.

Wright's Celery Tea cures constipation, sick headaches. 25c at druggists.

Persistent Coughs

A cough which seems to hang on in spite of all the remedies which you have applied certainly needs energetic and sensible treatment. For twenty-five years that standard preparation of cod-liver oil, has proved its effectiveness in curing the trying affections of the throat and lungs, and this is the reason why: the cod-liver oil, partially digested, strengthens and vitalizes the whole system; the hypophosphites act as a tonic to the mind and nerves, and the glycerine soothes and heals the irritation. Can you think of any combination so effective as this?

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. See that the man and fish are on the wrapper.

THE WRIGHT MEDICAL CO.,

Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Last spring I purchased a box of Wright's Celery Capsules from L. C. Davenport, druggist, Bluffton, Ind., and used them for stomach trouble with which I had been afflicted for more than 15 years. Since taking your Capsules I have lost all trace of pain and my stomach is entirely well. I can eat anything and can truthfully say that I have not felt better in years.

Yours Respectfully,

MRS. LAURA WEISHAUF.

GETTING READY

Every expectant mother has a trying ordeal to face. If she does not

Nature is not given proper assistance.

Mother's Friend

is the best help you can use at this time. It is a liniment, and when regularly applied several months before baby comes, it makes the advent easy and nearly painless. It relieves and prevents "morning sickness," relaxes the overstrained muscles, relieves the distended feeling, shortens labor, makes recovery rapid and certain without any dangerous after-effects. Mother's Friend is good for only one purpose, viz.: to relieve motherhood of danger and pain.

Oldest Distillery In Kentucky.

[Walter Champ in Courier-Journal.]

STANDING on a hill-side on Mr. L. M. Bedford's farm near Kiserston, in Bourbon county, and in sight of the famous "Peacock" distillery, are the ruins of Kentucky's first distillery. It was built in 1790—one hundred and 7 years ago—by Jacob Spears, who came to Kentucky from Pennsylvania before the whiskey rebellion occurred in that State, which was caused by an insurrection of the people to protest against the tax imposed upon distilled spirits by an act of Congress in 1791, and which was quelled without bloodshed by troops sent by President Washington.

The distillery was a log building, erected on a stone foundation. The logs were hewed by Mr. Spears from trees felled by two darkies, who hauled them to the distillery. Notched after the fashion of all logs used in primitive buildings, they were placed in position and secured by wooden pins instead of nails. Of the distillery proper nothing now remains except the foundation. The malt-house built of stone several years later, is now used as a store-house for stock feed, and may stand the ravages of time for another century. The spring which furnished water for the crude distilling plant was walled in a century ago with splendid masonry, and to-day supplies sparkling water for man and beast.

In this rude distillery was made the first Bourbon whiskey ever distilled—the product which was destined to make famous in the remotest parts of the earth the names of Bourbon and Kentucky.

The equipment of this distillery was necessarily primitive. It had but one still, and the daily output was small, not over a barrel and a half being made each day. The whiskey was a superior article, however, and aged citizens tell that it did not produce the headaches and other ill effects which are a result of the use of Kentucky liquor of a later vintage. Mr. Spears and a relative named Easton, who also came from Pennsylvania, constructed flat-boats on which they took the whiskey to the New Orleans market.

Fine whiskey could be bought in those days as low as ten cents per gallon, John Allen, a pioneer of Bourbon, who was also a distiller during President Washington's Administration, acquired about 500 acres of fertile Bourbon county land by exchanging a gallon of whiskey for each acre. This would have required about ten barrels for a splendid farm.

Within fifty yards of the ruins of the famous old distillery is a fine old mansion built 100 years ago by Thomas Metcalf—twenty years before he became Governor of Kentucky. The house was built for a farmer named Shipp, and contains nine large rooms. The walls are twenty inches thick, the floors and window-sills and door are made of well-seasoned wood, and the ash rafters are securely fastened at the comb of the roof with pins made from the same wood. The house is in a splendid state of preservation, and should be a comfortable home for a generation not yet born. The mantels are five and one-half feet in height, and are of fine workmanship. From cellar to garret every part of the grand old house shows the same careful and honest workmanship. Every room in the mansion, except the kitchen, was frescoed in the quaint and pretty Holland designs in vogue a hundred years ago, and the figures are plainly discernable in rooms where they have not been covered with white-wash by irreverent tenants. In the ceiling of one room can yet be seen the quilting books used by the wives of our forefathers, and one can readily imagine the merry times our ancestors enjoyed at the quilting-bees in the old mansion.

Suffered 20 Years.

MRS. MARY LEWIS, wife of a prominent farmer, and well known by all old residents near Belmont, N. Y., writes: "For twenty-seven years I had been a constant sufferer from nervous prostration, and paid large sums of money for doctors and advertised remedies without benefit. Three years ago my condition was alarming; the least noise would startle and unnerve me. I was unable to sleep, had a number of sinking spells and slowly grew worse. I began using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills. At first the medicine seemed to have no effect, but after taking a few bottles I began to notice a change; I rested better at night, my appetite began to improve and I rapidly grew better, until now I am as nearly restored to health as one of my age may expect. God bless Dr. Miles' Nervine."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.
